Fire Hazard

The great danger of fire flares up before the owners of property in the congested danger zone of the town like a night mare as they reflect and consider the great hazard. Still the council makes no move to safe-guard the town property from conflagrations, such as are occuring almost daily in this country. Start now to equip a voluntary fire squad with ladders, axes, hose-real and a small engine outfit—house it all in the center of the town and publish the fire alarm call,so that all citizens of the community may respond promptly in time of need. In the meantime let our people take every precaution against starting a fire. A fire started in a gale, such as we have had for the past week would wipe out the frame section of the town.

Will the Council move in the matter before it is too late?

Road Work

Capt. Higginbotham has moved his convict camp to a location midway between Appomattox Courthouse and Evergreen and has his force housed and ready for work as soon as the weather permits. The sum of $35,000 has been allotted to this project, known as No. 10.

More than a year ago the highway authorities stopped this work abruptly and moved away, because the supervisors of the county granted the petition of free holders asking that the railroad crossing just East of Evergreen be not closed to the public.

The last Legislature then passed a law taking the matter out of the hands of supervisors and lodging the matter of railway crossings with the State Highway Commission. The commission held a session here and had manny citizens before it protesting against the closing of the crossing and none in favor of it, except possibly some railroad interest. It is said the railroad company will pay the highway department $35,000 for closing this and one other crossing between Evergreen and Pamplin. The report of the commission's action on the matter has been received here and they ordered the crossings closed. A very bad precedent to say the least of it.

Buckingham Politics

TheBuckingham correspondent of the Lynchburg News sums up the political situation thero in the following manner:

Not since the memory of man goeth back to the contrary has there been such a division among the leaders of the Democratic party, as is the case at this time here. It reminds one of what was often seen during the Civil War, when one brother would be fighting in the southern army and the other in the northern.

E. W. Hubbard has served his county as commonwealth's attorney for 30 to 40 years and has never been defeated, but Mr. Hubbard's health has been so bad that it was not thought that he would be a candidate to succeed himself and in that case his law partner, John B. Boatwright will offer at the August primary and there are other aspirants who are said to be determined to make the race whether Mr. Hubbard is a candidate or not.

Dr. G. L. Morris, who has been a factor to be reckoned with in politics for many years, will support his friend Mr. Hubbard if he runs, and having been so largley endorsed for appointment as treasurer as to win over all opposition, will put up a strong fight for the nomination as treasurer. His only pronounced opponent is H. E. Griffin, who defeated the late W. T. Snoddy for sheriff at the last election. For sheriff Captain Frank Patteson and young Mr. Hughes, are so far the candidates mentioned, both of whom are now serving as deputy sheriffs. Under the new law no county can have but one commissioner of revenue. C. C. Camden has long been commissioner in district No. 2 and is a candidate for the position as commissioner in the whole county; however, he and young Mr. Wood, who is now commissioner in district No. 1 are good friends and may not oppose each other. Should Mr. Hubbard decide not to be a candidate to succeed himself it is understood that John B. Boatwright, C. R. Wood, and J. Horace White will all enter the race.

It is thought that each of the six supervisors will be candidates to succeed themselves and it is important at this time particularly that the county should have a board composed of wise business men, as the finances of the county need men who can by good management and economy, gradually work off the indebtedness of the county by providing for the payment of the proposed $50,000 bond issue.

Co-Op Receivers Report

Intimate details of the operations of the Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association from its organization to May, 1926, are given in the special report of the receivers for the association pursuant to order of the United States district court for the eastern district of North Carolina, to be filed today.

This report was mailed to the eastern district of Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina, and the western district Friday. It was made pursuant to the order of the United States district court for the eastern district of North Carolina to make a thorough investigation of and report upon the affairs of the Tobacco Growers Co-operative Association.

The seventeen schedules under the two exhibits include general overhead expenses on all crops, redrying charges on all crops, carrying charges on all crops, salaries of officers and directors, amount per diem paid directors, paymedts for attorney's fees, real estate purchases, South Carolina Warehouse Corporation; real estate purchases, Eastern Carolina Warehousing Corporation; real estate purchases, Central Carolina Warehousing Corporation; real estate purchases, Bright Leaf Warehouse Corporation; real estate purchases, Dark Leaf Warehousing Corporation; leased warehouses by the Eastern Carolina Warehousing Corporation, Central Carolina Warehousing Corporation, Bright Leaf Warehousing Corporation and Dark Leaf Warehousing Corporation, and the claims for attorney's fees and salaries filed with the special master.

The life of the association has been one to cause considerable interest in the tobacco belt where approximately 100,000 members are located in three states. This report made by the receivers is exhaustive and takes up many important items.

James H. Pou, Hallett S. Ward and Merton L. Corey have their signatures affixed to the report of the receivers.

Farm Aid

The Norbeck-Johnson $6,000,000 Seed Loan bill was increased to $8,000,000 and approved by the House Agricultural Committee.

The measure is designed to furnish means by which farmers in depressed agricultural areas may obtain seed with which to plant their crops.

Of the $2,000,000 increase $1,500,000 would be used for loans to South Carolina farmers to buy fertilizer and $500,000 to Florida fruit growers to rehabilitate orchards damaged by the hurricane.

TO MAKE LOAN TO FARMERS

The original $6,000,000 would be for making loans to farmers in drought areas of the north west, principally Montana, North and South Dakota and Minnesota.

Representative Fulmer, Democrat, South Carolina, told the committee thousands of farmers in his State were desperately in need of money to buy fertilizer because of last year's drought.

Representative Aswell, of Louisiana, ranking Democrat on the committee, proposed the half million for Florida, and said he was doing so on behalf of Representative Drane, Democrat, Florida, who had introduced a bill for orchard rehabilitation in his State.

Chairman Haugen, was instructed to request special consideration of the measure on the floor.

Washington's Early Adventures Now Assuming New Significance

By HENRY BOTSFORD

AFTER well nigh a century and three-quarters a new interest has recently been aroused in the earliest military adventures of George Washington.

When barely twenty-one years old, in 1753, Washington was sent by Governor Dinwiddie of Virginia into the far northwestern wilderness—that is, northwestern Pennsylvania—to warn the French that they must cease their efforts to occupy that region. Recent researches have given a new historical significance to that expedition, during which Washington, always reckless of his personal safety, had one of his narrow escapes from death at the hands of a treacherous Indian guide.

The French at that time occupied Canada and claimed the Mississippi and Ohio Valleys. Though the fringe of English speaking colonies along the Atlantic contained the chief European population, France maintained sovereignty over most of North America's area. They were apparently determined to occupy northwestern Pennsylvania, partly because it was known even then to be rich in petroleum.

Region's Wealth Known

Pioneers and missionaries, English, French, German and Dutch, had all reported to theft governments that the petroleum was of great potential value. There is, however, no reason to believe that Washington knew of its existence or value until his adventure of 1753. Then he learned that the oil had long been used by the Indians and the pioneering whites for fuel and light, for medicine and in making war paint. Washington was so much impressed with its possibilities that he later became owner of a large area of oil-bearing lands. Although the petroleum industry in its modern form was then undreamed of, Washington was so sure that a fortune resided in his oil-bearing lands that in his will he listed them as his most valuable holdings, in the property schedule attached to the will he wrote:

"This tract was taken up by General Lewis and myself on account of the bituminous spring which it contains, of so inflammable a nature as to burn as freely as spirits and as nearly difficult to extinguish."

The Will of Washington

Some historians declare that in an earlier will Washington dedicated this "burning spring" to the public. At any rate, it had passed from his ownership before his death. He sold this tract for $200,000, but, suspecting it might revert to his estate under a mortgage, he warned his heirs that should it do so it would be worth much more than the $200,000.

Although Washington's first knowledge of petroleum was gained within a few miles of the place where the first oil well in the world was drilled, that first well was not opened until one hundred and six years later, 1859. In that year Edwin Laurentine Drake bored the first well, just south of Titusville, Pennsylvania, and really started the modern petroleum industry.

A Development Wonder

Today the American industry is the major part of the world's oil business. Americans are directing oil developments all over the world. It is all part of the huge problem: to make sure that the tomorrows shall see America's requirements met. Every decade the production of petroleum has doubled. Science and technical progress have met all demands. Foreign investment and development are in the nature of insurance for the future.

In the days of Drake and the industry's beginnings petroleum's value lay in lubricants and kerosene. The age of machinery was only beginning, with its insatiate demand for lubricants, while kerosene, though the best illuminant ever known, was dangerous because poor refining left gasoline that was liable to explode. It is difficult nowadays, when the world is being combed for more petroleum to make more gasoline, to realize that gasoline was once a nuisance and a menace. The internal combustion engine created the demand for gasoline, now the primary product of petroleum. The demands of millions of motor cars increasing constantly, invention and chemistry were set at work by the captains of the industry to make the barrel of petroleum turn out a larger and larger proportion of gasoline. This was done by the cracking process, through which every year now sees a larger proportion of crude oil turned into gasoline.

High and Growing Demands

Today well-nigh 2,500,000 barrels of petroleum are required every day to satisfy the demand for motor cars, tractors, tanks, buses, artificial gas plants and the innumerable by-products. Invention is constantly finding new uses, as enterprise just as constantly finds new supplies of petroleum. The wonderful and rather mysterious fluid has revolutionized social habits and industrial methods; yet it is only two-thirds of a century since the industry had its feeble beginning in the Pennsylvania oil country.

This year the country will use about 750,000,000 barrels of petroleum. The country will use 700,000,000 gallons of gasoline and will export 1,900,000 more. The production, processing and marketing of petroleum is probably second only to agriculture among American industries.

Roundly, 70 per cent of the world's petroleum industry is American. Ten billions of capital is invested in it—half the valuation of the national railroad system. It employs just about 1,000,000 people. The petroleum pipe line system, gridironing a good share of the country, aggregates about 85,000 miles. Petroleum revolutionized naval warfare by bringing in the oil burning ship; it is fast revolutionizing merchant marines in the same fashion. Multiplication of motor cars, along with the special taxation of their gasoline, has made possible the modern highway system.

A True Social Service

Perhaps the most nearly revolutionary result of Drake's modernization of the petroleum industry is to be found in the changes it has brought in the life of rural America. It has carried the city to the country, the country to the city. It has, by making possible the cheap and quick transportation that everybody nowadays enjoys, enabled country and city to know and understand each other as they never did before. It has brought social and educational privileges to country dwellers that a few decades ago seemed absolutely denied to them. On the one hand it has enabled the cities to spread out into suburban areas and the zone of country estates; on the other, it has enabled the people of the open country to have neighbors, society, church and school privileges, intimate acquaintance.

It is a historic fact that the tendency toward division of interest and understanding between city and country is the most serious internal menace to the security of nations, to the integrity of society.

More than anything else, country and city need to know and understand each other and each other's problems. The easy transportation, the ready opportunity for association and acquaintance that have come with the Age of Petroleum have made possible, in this favored country at least, exactly this new intimacy and understanding.

When in need of job printing call on us. Quick service and the prices are right.
